An American Idealism which then is a Response to Marx and Hegel Reviews – to then Complete the Analysis

By Shomit Sirohi

Introduction

It is called capital not my brilliance as Retamar argues.

I. So in fact it is quantitative and even labouring process of the labour theory of value that Marxists respect and ruthelessly respect

In fact then Marxism is a science – and is about the well read response to capitalist and businesses and even enterpreneurs and such innovations which are then in fact results of profits by labour. And is such a process called capital or companies. It just is efficient – it just does innovate and is just that process of financial transactions – which is it simplicity to a Marxist – it is just monetarism and just that process – which is banal because it is a structure with a dynamic called capital – capital works as in fact a transcendental and a formalism which is like say a trope and finance and dynamic spending – it is actually in fact the process of accumulation and profitability which makes it investment cycles and and so puppet and dwarf to in fact a number of investments and a number of dynamic flows.

Company A has a business model and structure – forwards financial flows to Europe and is just that process of simplicity. It is not a great subject, a great amount of genius, not a exaggerated importance of how it works the world – all of this is mystifying – it is just a structure which then is about financial flows –

Art is what the artist says it is – like that capital is just monetarism.

II. Now American Idealism agrees and completes the idealism of it

Imagine then a company worker understanding the process of labour, and supervising them – learning the website, how it works and making a fortune – but also in fact learning how to run his company – this then is each capitalist who is busy in American Idealism successfully running companies.